"Seeing is Believing."

And a good lamp must be simple; when it is not simple it is not good. Simple, Beautiful, Good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only, it is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.

Look for this stamp. The ROCHESTER. If the lamp-fitter meets the genuine Rochester and the style you want, send us for our new illustrated catalogue, and we will send you a lamp safely by express—your choice of over 2,000 varieties from the Largest Lamp Store in the World.

QUINN'S OINTMENT

Mr. J. J. Case, (Hickory Grove Farm, Point of Jay's River, Racine, Wis., says: "After 32 years' experience, I removed a large lump of two years' standing, from a 3 year old child, with three applications of QUINN'S OINTMENT."

It is the best preparation I have ever used or heard of. I heartily recommend it to all Horsemen.

We have hundreds of such testimonials.

Price, $1.50 per bottle. Ask your druggist for it. It is not sold by mail, send us the name and address for trial box.

The Proposed Road Law.

There is a bill pending in the house reported by the revisionary commission entitled "roads and pass-ways" that ought to and probably will become a law. It provides that the county court with the aid and advice of the road supervisor shall classify the roads in the several counties of the state in 1894 into first, second and third class roads. Those of first-class shall be not more than sixty nor less than thirty feet wide; those of second-class not more than thirty nor less than twenty feet wide, and of third-class not more than twenty nor less than fifteen feet wide, with road beds of at least twenty, sixteen and twelve feet respectively, and broken stones or gravel shall be used to form surface when it is necessary or convenient. When condition of any road requires it tile draining must be made. The fiscal court of the county shall at the April term, 1894, elect a supervisor of roads for a term of two years, who shall be a citizen of the county and if the court desires a civil engineer. The supervisor shall receive an annual salary of not more than $1,200 payable out of the county treasury.

The fiscal court shall prescribe a period in each year within which the levying and grading of roads shall be done; but said periods shall not extend beyond the first of October in any year. It shall be the duty of the supervisor to report in writing to the judge of the county court all failures of contractors to comply with their contracts in regard to roads or bridges, and to appear and prosecute in all proceedings against such delinquents so returned to him. The supervisor, with the consent of the county judge, may designate certain roads or parts of roads that are not to be let out as hereinbefore required, but which are to be worked and kept in repair, either by special contracts privately made, or by hands and teams hired by him, or by delinquent tax payers, or by persons sentenced to labor, or who, by law, may be liable to work out fines imposed by juries or courts. Such overseers and persons hired as herein provided are to be paid out of the road and bridge fund. Delinquent tax payers shall be worked on roads in their justices' districts, and as convenient as may be to their places of residence, and shall be allowed credit on taxes due by them at the rate of one dollar for each full day's work.

All male persons confined in county jails or work-houses, either under sentence of court for misdemeanors or imprisoned for non-payment of fines and costs, shall be available to the supervisor for the purpose of working them on the public highways. In counties having workhouses, the prisoners may be obtained by the supervisor from the board of commissioners and the superintendent of the work house, upon such terms as may be agreed upon between them. These are a few points of the proposed law which if put into effect would add incalculably to convenience of travel and the value of lands. Then the lines

"When this way you travel Pray bring your own gravel," would no longer apply in Kentucky.
—Danville Advocate.

J. Kennedy Tod and the K. U.

The case of J. Kennedy Tod & Co against the K. U. Railroad Co., after a litigation of nearly two years, was decided in their favor by the United States court last week. The court ordered that unless the second mortgage bondholders pay the debt of the road within four months from January 1st, 1893, that the road be sold, with one million as a starter. The road will remain in the hands of Receiver Kenn until that time. The lines of the K. U. have certainly fallen in hard places, but we hope will come out all right, as its best edge to the mountains can not be calculated.

A bill increasing the pension of the Mexican soldiers, has passed the house at Washington.

Let the People Elect.

Why should not the Democratic party advocate the proposed constitutional change providing for the election of president by the direct vote of the people? It is the most honest way of getting at the will of the people. It places the selection of chief magistrate in the hands of the people instead of in the hands of the politicians. It prevents the centralization of corruption funds in doubtful states. It prevents partisan returning boards in certain states from reversing the will of the people. It makes the voter of every state equal. It prevents dictation at party conventions by doubtful states.

That the change would be of immense advantage to the Democrats, it is but necessary to glance at the following figures to have it demonstrated. The large majority of the voters in the country are Democrats, and the Democrats have cast a majority of the votes at every election since '72 except in 1880. The following is the table of pluralities:

Cleveland's plurality in 1892.....431,898
Cleveland's plurality in 1888.....38,544
Cleveland's plurality in 1884.....26,584
Garfield's plurality in 1880.....3,884 Tilden's plurality in 1876.....236,918

It is evident that the Democrats have everything to gain and nothing to lose by the change. They escape from the dictations of New York and they almost certainly elect every president for many years to come. The people have everything to gain and nothing to lose, for the election is placed in their hands and political manipulation will be of little avail.—Louisville Post.

The Road Convention.

The road convention held at Lexington last week, was not at all attended as it should have been. A permanent organization was effected, however, by the election of R. H. Gray, of Woodford county, as president, and W. J. Thomas, of Shelby county, secretary. The road bill, now pending in the legislature was discussed at length. The committee on resolutions reported as follows:

Resolved, First—That this organization be made permanent, and that its object is to improve the people of the state with the importance of improving our public roads and instituting a road system that will produce better results and distribute more equitably and fairly the burdens of making and keeping the public roads in repair.

Second—That the county judges be urged to request to appoint delegates to its meeting to be held at Lexington, January 17th, 1893.

Third—That the newspapers of the state be requested to present the matter to their readers, and use their best endeavors to awaken them to the importance of the subject, and to the material benefits that would accrue to them and to the public from a more enlightened and efficient system.

Fourth—That all persons who are interested in the improvement of the roads of the State be earnestly requested to co-operate with the convention in eliciting interests and creating a public sentiment upon this most important subject.

Fifth—That the legislature be earnestly requested to enact as soon as possible a law that will cure the ruinous effect of our present miserable system, and promote the material improvement of public roads.

The convention adjourned to meet at Lexington, January 17th, 1893, and it is hoped that every county in the state will be represented, and much good be done.

Give Tom a Place.

Thos. Y. Fitzpatrick, of Prestonburg, will be an applicant for collector of internal revenue in his district. Tom Fitzpatrick has a heart in proportion to his body, and when the Democrats need help he is sure to be in the thickest of the fight. Such men deserve the spoils of office.—Winchester Democrat.

Believe not in malicious gossip. Be helpful toward all those in need. Be kind, sympathetic in actions, charitable in opinions and generous to faults, and remember that good manners, good morals and a good heart is the way to lasting love and true happiness.

There are thirty towns in America called Washington.

Carlisle the Coming Man.

A Washington correspondent says: "With Cleveland's election the star of John G. Carlisle rose again, and the people who know much about inside politics realize that the chance of Senator Carlisle's life has come. He is destined to be one of the greatest figures in the Cleveland administration. Carlisle's position will be more prominent than that of cabinet officers, except in the case of emergencies, in which some one portfolio might chance to secure temporary fame. Carlisle has reached the stage in his career where he is ripe for honors. His wonderful acumen and ability is conceded by every one, and his prominence as the great constitution defender and Mr. Cleveland's personal friend will give him the greatest opportunity he has ever had. There are said to be two politicians for whom Mr. Cleveland has a genuine liking; one is Carlisle, in whose sagacity he has confidence, the other is Russell, the Massachusetts governor, for whom Mr. Cleveland has a fondness as he entertains for him. Mr. Russell is not a cabinet probability on account of the lieutenant governorship of his state being in Republican hands. Three great figures of the Cleveland congress will be Carlisle, Gorman and Cochran."

Best Stock Pays Best.

One of the largest droves of choice horses ever received here was brought in on Wednesday last by J. Evans, from his Emerson, Ia., farm. There were seventeen car loads, and every animal was as near perfection as they make them. They were polled Angus, averaged 1,490 lbs. and brought $6. Had they been divided up into smaller lots undoubtedly they would have brought better figures. Mr. Evans has about 1,000 head of young cattle on his Emerson farm, 400 of which are pure-breds.—Breeder's Gazette.

Dictator was an old horse when H. C. McDowell, his present owner, gave $25,000 for him, but he has earned in stud fees and produce $150,000 for the proprietor of Ashland, and is now celebrated as the sire of the wonderful Jay-Eye-See, and the grand-sire of Nancy Hanks, Directum and Direct, besides the progenitor of hundreds of other fast horses.

A Fight for Place.

Mr. Bascom, of Bath county, representative and a prominent Democrat in that section, is an applicant for collector in the Lexington district. Three members of congress, Breckinridge, Paynter and Lisle have counties in the district, and all of them will pull for the collectorship, which carries so much patronage with it. Senator Blackburn also lives in the district, and he and Col. Breckinridge are said to be looking fiercely at each other with the other eye on the bone. Col. Thomas Shelby and State Senator Mulligan, of Lexington, are doing their level best to get the collectorship. Senator Blackburn is said to want it for his brother. The eighth congressional district may have an applicant for commissioner of internal revenue—the place whence all the collectorships radiate.—Danville Advocate.

Undesirable Citizens.

An exchange gives us a list of nine classes of people who do a town no good. First, those who go out of town to do their trading. Second, those opposing improvements. Third, those who prefer a quiet town to one of push and business. Fourth, those who imagine they own the town. Fifth, those who think business can be done slyly without advertising. Sixth, those who deride public spirited men. Seventh, those opposing every movement that does not originate with themselves. Eighth, those who oppose every enterprise that does not appear to benefit them. Ninth, those who seek to injure the credit of individuals.

CURRENT NEWS AND COMMENT.

The Kentucky legislature should at once enact a bill donating $100,000 towards an exhibition of the mineral and timber interests of our state. To be niggardly in the matter now is suicidal to development, and especially is this the case with regard to Eastern Kentucky. Other sections of the state have time and again had state aid in various ways. Capitalists have thus been attracted, and development progressed. But Eastern Kentucky has so far been kept in the background by these more favored sections, and as a consequence is comparatively unknown. Our representatives should, therefore, do all that is possible to secure this appropriation, but at the same time they should throw around the appropriation such safe guards as will insure a full share of the expenditure to an exhibit of Eastern Kentucky's resources. An exhibit of our resources at Chicago next year would incite investment, and immigration to the mountains of Kentucky soon inhabit our hills. By all means, gentlemen, vote the appropriation, and give our end of the state a show.

CAPT. JAMES BLACKBURN is an applicant for the position of internal revenue collector in the seventh district, and all good Democrats of the mountain counties will with us endorse him for the place. In time of need he is one man from the blue grass that we can always count on, and remembering the readiness with which he responds, mountain Democrats are for him to a man. Let Jim Blackburn have the place by all means, for the laborer is worthy his hire, and Jim Blackburn has made more sacrifices for Democratic success than any Democrat in the seventh district.

The Live Stock Record, the oldest horse paper in Kentucky, and one of the best in the country, on Saturday issued its holiday number, which is a beauty. The front page is done in colors and contains a picture of a model race horse, while the inside is embellished with the pictures of many prominent race horses and replete with information about the stock farms of that section. Every man interested in the breeding of fine stock should be a subscriber to this valuable paper. Address the publishers, Lexington, Ky., and get sample copies and terms.

EAST from Hazel Green, and not over fifteen miles away, lies a body of canal coal greater in quantity than all in the world beside, and the quality is not equaled upon the habitable globe. We refer to the canal coal fields on Caney, which embrace thousands of acres in extent. Can we afford, therefore, to miss an exhibit at Chicago's world's fair in 1893? Nay, verily.

CHARLES A. HARDIN, formerly a resident of Louisville, is under surveillance in that city for robbing an express package of $85,000 that was en route to Galveston, Texas, but his accusers have so far failed to establish his guilt or even find incriminating evidence. Meantime the missing money is not found, and the steal is shrouded in mystery's most sombre robes.

A DECADE of development would demonstrate that the mountains of Eastern Kentucky is worth more in mineral and timber wealth than all the state beside.

THE thermometer registered 25 degrees below zero at Fergus Falls, Minn., on Sunday night, and from 12 to 24 degrees below was not unusual throughout the northwest.

Gov. BUCHANAN, of Tennessee, on Saturday pardoned twenty-five convicts out of the Nashville penitentiary, but Henry Clay King, Poston's murderer, was not among the lucky ones.

W. C. BENTON, the pension agent recently fined $500 by Judge Barr in the United States court at Covington, preferred a ten-days' incarceration to paying the fine, and is now "doing time" in the Covington bastille.

THE HERALD is in possession of some awfully encouraging railroad news for the people hereabout, but will not make it public for some time. Watch these columns, and as soon as we secure a few more pointers we'll serve 'em to you hot.

Two counterfeiters, Joe and Fred Reynolds, were arrested at Joplin, Mo., and a quantity of spurious coin, dollars and halves, found upon their persons. Their shanty was raided and the dies and tools captured. They had used the "queer" quite freely in that section.

The Kentucky legislature should at least be consistent. It spends valuable time in reducing the salary of a page that it may appear as a model of economy, and upon the heels of it votes itself a salary for services not rendered. Such consistency puts to shame the crown jewel.

The legislature voted itself a holiday from Dec. 23, 1892, to Jan. 2, 1893, and voted also that no deduction in pay should result from absenteeism. When the law-makers thus defraud and rob the tax-payer what may we not expect from the officials selected to enforce the law? The sequence to steal would not be unnatural.

The Courier-Journal of Saturday says "In order to get away on the 9:35 train yesterday morning, the members of the house at Frankfort, which stood adjourned from Thursday to meet at 10 o'clock Friday, met shortly after breakfast, turned up the hands of the house clock till they rested at the hour of 10, received a message from the governor and adjourned for the holiday season in ample time for the train. It is hardly necessary to add that this is not the first time the legislature has committed violence upon old Father Time."

POLITICIANS who have been busy for some time in preparing a cabinet for President Cleveland, give out the following as the result of their labors. If Mr. Cleveland will pardon the suggestion—supposing, of course, that the slate as made up here is his choice—we think he has made a mistake in not making Mr. Carlisle his secretary of state. However, if it suits the president-elect, we have nothing more to say. But here is the "slate":

Secretary of state—Edward J. Phelps, of Vermont.
Secretary of the treasury—John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky.
Secretary of the navy—Daniel S. Lamont, of New York.
Secretary of war—Patrick A. Collins, of Massachusetts.
Postmaster general—Isaac Pusey Gray, of Indiana.
Secretary of the interior—Chief Justice Pinney, of Wisconsin, or William R. Morrison, of Illinois.
Attorney general—George Gray, of Delaware, or J. Randolph Tucker, of Virginia.

Secretary of agriculture—Charles H. Jones, of Missouri, or William H. Hatch, of Missouri.

Hon. M. C. Lisle, of Clark county, recently elected to congress from the tenth district by a majority of 2,200, will be one of the youngest members of the lower house. He was born on Four Mile creek, in Pinchom precinct, Clark county, Ky., September 23, 1862; attended common schools and worked on a farm until he was seventeen years of age, after which he attended the city schools of Winchester, attended Kentucky University from 1881 to 1884, and then Columbia College law school from 1885 to 1887; was editor and proprietor of the Winchester Democrat from 1887 to 1889; was elected county judge of Clark county in August, 1890; was married in April, 1887, to Miss Lizzie Buckner Bean, of Clark county.—Kentucky Register.

Mrs. W. J. Wallis has the thanks of the editor and his better—Z for a mess each of some nice hog-souse and sausage.

Mrs. W. J. Wallis has been for sometime suffering with a carbuncle on her neck, but is at present much improved.

Mrs. Nancy Ringo, who a few days since gave birth to twin babies, has been dangerously ill but is now reported better.

Mrs. Lou Day took advantage of the cold snap and filled her ice-house with the frozen fluid for summer consumption.

Miss Carrie Cope and Walter S. Day, of Breathitt county, attended the McLin-Day nuptials at this place Thursday evening last.

Arberry Brooks was out Sunday for the first time in many weeks. He has had a long and tedious spell of inflammatory rheumatism.

THE HERALD extends new year's greeting to its host of friends and patrons, and wishes them, one and all, a year of peace, pleasure and profit.

Married—Dec. 20th, at the residence of John Hampton, father of the bride, on Lacey creek, George Huber and Miss Orelia Hampton, Elder J. T. Pieratt officiating.

In the hurry of putting our paper to press last week, James Richmond was named as an attendant upon the groom in the McLin-Day wedding. Instead it should have read Walter Day. Mr. Richmond, who is a personal friend of the groom, was present as a spectator.

When you go to Lexington get your meals at the English Kitchen, 12 W. Short street. Gus Luigart, the proprietor, will give you more to eat than is good for a small price than any man in Kentucky, and he will treat you nicely beside. Everybody in this section eats with Gus, when in that city.

Misses Lula Kash and Linney Combs, bridesmaids, accompanied Mr. McLin and bride to Rose Hill, the Virginia home, and our citizens need not be surprised to hear of another wedding soon after their return—maybe two of them. Walter Day and Blair McLin are in the matrimonial market to capture prizes, and now is their time, or they must forever after hold their peace.

Sam Salvers, county attorney of Morgan county, and one of the brightest lawyers of Eastern Kentucky, was in the city yesterday.

S. J. Killgore, county attorney, and J. T. Watts, sheriff of Knott county, were in the city yesterday. While here they purchased of R. R. Perry a large heater and other appliances for the new court-house just finished at Hazard.—Winchester Democrat, Dec. 21.

The school at the Caskey school-house, taught by Richmond De-Busk, closed on Friday, the 23rd inst., and Richmond will matriculate at the academy next Monday, and take the teachers' course.

The news reached here Thursday that Mrs. Sally, wife of the blacksmith who recently leased Frank Tyler's shop, had died at Hazard, in Perry county, a few days before, and Mr. Sally at once left for that place. He has the sympathy of the people of this community in his sad affliction.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Day set a sumptuous supper on the occasion of the marriage of their daughter Lillie to Mr. McLin, to which a few of the immediate friends of the family were invited. The table groined under its weight of good things, and the guests will keep the event green in their memory for a long time.

The weekly Courier-Journal and THE HERALD will both be sent to any address one year for only $1.75, and now is the time to subscribe. Could any man want more for so little? Just think of it! Two of the best papers in the state for only $1.75! It is not often that you can get such a combination, and you should at once avail of it.

Otis W. Snyder, the Lexington jeweler, has an advertisement in this issue to which your attention is directed. In addition to a full line of spectacles, silverware, plated-ware, etc., he is just now offering a splendid line of Christmas and holiday goods, and if you need anything of the kind, it will pay you to write to him or call when in that city.

William Gevedon, of West Liberty, passed through the city this week en route to Lexington to attend school. Miss Clara Pieratt, one of the prettiest young ladies in Eastern Kentucky, is visiting the family of J. G. Trimble. Daniel James and wife, of Bushton, Ill., were in the city this week, visiting Mr. James' sister, Mrs. John L. Stephens. They left yesterday for Hazel Green to visit relatives.—Sentinel-Democrat, Dec. 23.

Are you going to require any kind of candies for Xmas? If so, give Wolfe a trial. Candies as low as the lowest, from 15¢ to 75¢ per pound. If you are going to visit Lexington be sure and call and inspect our stock. All are welcome. We also handle a complete line of fancy boxes, novelties, Christmas tree ornaments. Bread and cakes baked each day. 29 E. Main street, Lexington, Ky. Mail orders receive prompt attention.

Mr. Goodpastor, of the firm of Goodpastor & Stamper, of Grassy, Morgan county, is reported to have sold in the Mt. Sterling market, on last evening, 275 head of stock hogs that averaged 100 lbs or more, and is said to have netted 1¢ per pound for the lot. He was for two weeks buying these hogs, and the neat sum of $275 is certainly a handsome salary for the service. We wish it were possible to report that every man in the mountains had done as well.

At the annual election of officers of Mizpah Lodge, No. 507, F. & A. M., held on St. John's day, Dec. 27th, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: John H. Pieratt, W. M.; J. M. Ingram, S. W.; A. M. Nickell, J. W.; J. T. Day, Treas.; F. N. Day, Sec.; John W. S. D.; J. W. Taulbee, J. D.; J. W. Cravens, J. Stewards; J. H. Sebastian, Chap.; John H. Rose, Typ.; J. T. Pieratt, Chap.

Died—At her residence on Caney, Morgan county, Dec. 25, 1892, Mrs. Margaret Sebastian, aged 80 years. Aunt Peggy, who those who knew her, were called by those who knew her, and it was estimated that she dressed not less than 500 infants during her life. She was a member of the Baptist church for fifty years, and died in that faith full of the promise of the Master. She was left a widow twenty-five years ago, but by diligence and industry raised her family of five children to man's and woman's estate as honored citizens, and these together with a host of grandchildren and great grandchildren she leaves to mourn her death.

MORGAN COUNTY.

Ezel Evolutions.

EZEL, Dec. 26.—We had a splendid Christmas tree and all passed off joyful and nice; also, a lunch supper for the benefit of the church, which was profitably enjoyed, and arrangements are being made for the same purpose, on new year's eve at 6 o'clock p. m.

W. A. Williams, one of Johnson county and Republicans, was in town a few days ago. He says it is reported in that locality that Cleveland is going to contest the election to learn if possible why he did not carry all the states.

Mrs. Gilliani Pieratt, who has been in poor health for sometime, had a sinking spell last week and it was thought she was gone, but she revived though she is still in a precarious condition.

Tira W. Goad, of whom we made mention recently, gradually grew worse and last week was adjudged insane and sent to the asylum.

Buford and Berry Pieratt are at home from college for the holidays.

OLD THINGS DONE AWAY.

Our New System of Business.

To my friends and patrons: As I am determined to wind up my business, I take this method of informing you of my intention. On and after January 1st, 1893, my books will be closed and I will not sell any more goods on time. I expect, however, to keep a first-class stock of goods, which by selling for cash or produce I can sell you much cheaper than heretofore, and as soon as I dispose of all outstanding debts I expect to quit the goods business at this place.

Respectfully, J. M. PIERATT.

LEE COUNTY.

St. Helens Sayings.

ST. HELENS, Dec. 25.—Jake Toler and Rose Roberts had a difficulty last week over a settlement, in which the former shot the latter through the thigh, inflicting a painful though not dangerous wound.

Miss Lizzie McCune, of Winchester, has been employed to teach a winter school at this place. She has just finished a school at Hopeville, this county. She comes well recommended.

Mrs. Belle Hieronymus spent Christmas with her parents Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Adams, at Lexington. Miss Mollie Hieronymus, of Gray bend, accompanied her.

Dr. A. M. Arnold, C. T. Snowden, and Roland Walton went out hunting last week at Gray bend, and the result of their expedition was field larks.

Letcher Snowden, wife and baby visited the family of F. W. Beatty, Louisville, during the Xmas holidays.

Miss Lou McGuire has been at Lexington during the past week, under treatment for her throat.

D. B. Hobbs spent Christmas with his best girl in Wolfe.

Eli Kash, of Stillwater, spent Christmas in our midst.

LORENA.

A New Year's Greeting.

To my many friends and customers: In extending to you my new year's greeting, I wish to thank you for the kind favors you have bestowed on me in the past, and to ask a continuance of the same for the future. I shall continue in the future as in the past to constantly keep on hand a well selected and full line of general merchandise, and by giving you good goods at the right price to be able to merit a liberal share of your patronage and build up a still larger trade, in which a small per cent. will aggregate a large profit.

Yours very respectfully, W. T. CASKEY.

Last Call and Fair Warning.

Please bear in mind that after January 1st, 1893, our books will be closed, and we hope no one will ask for credit, as we are determined to do a strictly cash business. Please drop in and settle that little note or account you owe us. Respectfully,

H. F. PIERATT & CO.

E. C. Jones of Lane, Wolfe county, was at court Monday mingling with his old friends. Capt. W. L. Hurst tells us that his oldest son, Julius, is recovering from a very severe attack of pneumonia. Floyd Fletcher and Mary Belle Holland were married the 11th at the home of Cephas Holland, the bride's father, on Holly creek, Wolfe county. Miss Binie Taulbee of Hazel Green, the charming daughter of Dr. J. A. Taulbee, is visiting relatives and friends in Jackson. A painful accident occurred at Henry Wallin's Saturday evening. His little four-year old boy Edgar was left in the room to watch the baby while Mrs. Wallin went into an adjoining room, and while lighting some pieces of paper in the grate his clothes caught fire. His mother heard his screams and rushed in and succeeded in smothering the flames. His neck and chin are badly burned but he is doing well and will recover.—Jackson Hustler.

The Unbeaten Monbars.

From the fact that "Monbars" is a stake winner over seven hundred and fifty other nominations, it would seem that whoever the fortunate purchaser may be at the Woodard sale in Lexington on January 9th, will secure a great prize. In our opinion "Monbars" as a five year old if nothing happens to him between now and then, will show a stallion record that will surprise the horsemen from Maine to California. His sire "Eagle Bird 2:21" was a very good stake winner a two, three and four year old. Mr. Don J. Leathers of Grand Rapids, one of the owners of the above stallion writes under date of Dec. 18th as follows: "I have used Quinn's Ointment and can safely say that it is one of the best remedies for splints, curbs, bunches and other blemishes that I have ever tried." This is the universal expression of the highest class of horsemen throughout the United States. Send 25 cents silver or stamps for trial box. Regular size $1.50. delivered. Address W. B. Eddy & Co., Whitehall, N. Y., unless you can obtain from your druggist.—For sale by Rose & Jones.

UNDER THE DAISIES.

Under the daisies they laid my heart—
Flowers above, the cold ground below;
Daisies, daisies, so pretty and true,
And could not tear our hearts asunder;
Daisies and violets bud and bloom,
And the sun kisses them as they grow;
But my heart rests in the moss-green tomb
For ever with the heart that it loves so.

O daisies fair, blow soft and sweet,
And cover my love from head to feet;
Nor let the cold wind o'er her blow,
But whisper soft that I miss her so.

Never again though the days grow long,
Shall I look for on my aching breast;
Never again shall I hear the voice
That soothed my heart in its vague unrest;
Never again shall her life press mine
Through the years that came, or the years That go.

But my face shall bear the added line
Of a heart that broke as it joyed her love.

O daisies fair, blow soft and sweet,
And cover my love from head to feet;
Nor let the cold wind o'er her blow,
But whisper soft that I miss her so.

Will she know me, when I meet her there,
Where the royal soul had softly dwelt,
She, who will still be true to me,
And I, who, maddened, have older grown;
Will she meet me on my aching breast,
With hands outstretched, and her face aglow,
And say: "Dear heart, I love you more Than when I left you so long ago."

O daisies fair, blow soft and sweet,
And cover my love from head to feet;
Nor let the cold wind o'er her blow,
But whisper soft that I miss her so.

MARTHA'S RECREATION.

Why a Good Receipt Failed in Her Case.

UNTIL the paper of the ejaulated
Farmer Brown,
bringing him
hand down upon one of his fat knees as he sat in his easy chair on the back porch
reading the one weekly paper that found its way to the old farmhouse.

He had finished the railroad horrors, murders and suicides, had taken a long survey of the market reports, and, to pass the half hour before his early bedtime, had wandered into the "home department" of the paper.

"That'll be just the thing for Mar-thy," she is looking pretty peaked this summer. Cur's how little women can stand novellas. Every little job of extra work tucks 'em right out.

"Here, mother," as a slim, weary looking woman came slowly up from the cellar where she had been straining the night's milk. "Here's something to cheer you up. I swan, we'll do it. 'Recreation for Women.' Have you read it? It says that all a farmer's wife needs to make her chirp and lively is a picnic once in awhile, or a jaunt in the woods. I gather moss and such like. As for the moss, why couldn't you go down to the clearin' nir after the cows, through the strip o' woods to the back pasture? We'll do the bait thing. I don't want to go sick, now the left of the work is over.
We'll go to Silver Lake to the farmers' picnic day after to-morrow. I feel like havin' a holiday myself."

"Well, Robert, you think best we'll try to go," said mother, as she washed the milk pails and turned them up on the sink to dry. "But I don't feel a bit like it. I don't know as I can get 'em all ready, coming the first of the week so. The girls' dresses I'll have to be done up and the boys' waists, and all the baking to do. It'll set me back terribly with my week's work."

"That's always the way you argy.
Let the girls wear anything. I do my best to have you enjoy yourself, and have an easy time of it, and I am set on your goin' this time."

"I'll try and get ready, Robert. I want to go, only things get behind so if I lose a day that I have to work all the harder to catch up again."

"You'll feel more like work after your holiday. I'll see you lots of good," he replied, nodding his head emphatically and picking up his paper again.

"Talk wqman writer says: 'If women will take more recreation they won't grow old nor wear out so fast, and will be as peart and jolly.' Just read it once! Never admit them clothes just yet. It won't hurt 'em if the dew falls on 'em."

"Say, Marthy, is my best shirt done up?" he called to the brown figure fitting among the shadows, stripping the clothes from the line and heaping them in the basket at her side.

"It is here. I'll run it to-morrow."
"Emily," she called to a half-grown girl who was passing through the yard with a basket of eggs. "Baby is crying. You'll have to play with him until I get the clothes folded and the sponge set for bread, and tell Sadie to get Robbie and Joe ready for bed."

"Yes, girls, tend the babies for mama. She's got a lot to do. We're all going picnicking Wednesday."

"Is ma going?" inquired Emily, whose experience in picnics was limited to the few school gatherings which she and Sadie had attended.

"Why, certain! That's what we're going for—to give your ma a rest.
She's worked too hard lately, with all the hayin' an' harvestin' hands to do for her. She needs a change. And the carpenters are coming next week to fix the barn. She must take her chance between times to rest up."

"We'll have to have something out of common to take along for lunch, Martha. How would some of them cinnamon rolls do that I like so well, and the truffin' cake that mother used to make, and one of the lemon pies that Aunt Harriet showed you how to make, with the white frosting all over it. We shall want to have things as good as the rest. Most all the neighbors are goin'." I heard 'em talkin' about it at the store. But I didn't think anything about our goin' till I read that piece. That kinder opened my eyes. I

MARTHA RUSHED WILDLY DOWN THE PATH.

swan, I believe there is something in that."

The following day was a busy one at the Brown farm. Baking, ironing, dressing chickens, letting out of tucks, trimming and remodeling hats, besides churning and getting the three hearty meals. At just eleven o'clock that night Martha finished polishing the last little shoe and set it in a row with the rest, five pairs of them altogether, not a button missing, and shining like a mirror.

"I believe that is all I can do tonight," she said to herself. "We shall have to be up early in the morning to be ready in time," and she crept carefully into bed beside her sleeping baby, too tired to even think.

"I must be getting dreadfully dull," she thought, next morning when the voices of the happy children had aroused her from her deep sleep of uter exhaustion. "Once I would have been a joy to the thought of spending a day at the lake, but I feel as though I would give the world to lie in bed all day."

Breakfast was eaten in a hurry, and the baskets packed with the fried chicken, and accompaniments. The lemon pie had not been forgotten, and the spicy cinnamon rolls filled the pantry with fragrance. Then there were the jellies, and the jug of tea, and the bottle of milk for the baby.

"Jump into the wagon, and we'll all take a ride," sang Mr. Brown merrily, as he stood, necktie in hand, waiting for Martha to tie it on for him. At last they were all ready and Sam had driven the wagon around to the front gate.
Martha had forgotten, in the hurry and bustle of getting them all ready, to set the hired man's dinner, and that must be done, as every farmer's wife knows. At last she lifted up baby, a heavy child of eighteen months, climbed up after him, and the Brown family were off for their holiday.

It was a lovely morning, and the ride would have been delightful to anyone less tired and worn-out than Martha was. It was not a very easy wagon, and it rattled noisily over the stony road. Martha wondered vaguely how it would seem to bowl along at the same rate of speed in Judge Peake's phaeton, as that worthy and his fine wife assailed them on the road. But then, she thought, the phaeton would not hold all the babies, who were chattering and laughing so gleefully in the back of the wagon, and poor faithful Martha would not have given up her babies for all the grandeur in the world. She had always felt a sort of pity for the judge's wife, who lived in the big lonely house with no children's voices in it.

The long ride came to an end at last, and they drew up in the beautiful grove which surrounded the lake. Long table-tops were already being covered with snow-cakes and decorated with flowers and evergreen branches. Busy matrons and happy maids were fitting everywhere, opening hampers, starting fires and hanging gypsy kettles. It all seemed like fairy land to the little Browns, and they fairly bubbled over with excitement. Martha was afraid to have them out of her sight at first, with the lake so near, the merry-go-round, and the roller coaster, to say nothing of the baseball grounds and running matches.

So she kept them all near her while she visited with neighbors, and helped here and there with the babies. But after dinner was over and the fragments cleared away and packed in their respective baskets, Martha felt that she must get away by herself and rest. The twins were entrusted to Emily and Sadie, with many admonitions in regard to their safety, while

Mr. Brown agreed to look after baby, and walked away with him to see the bears and monkeys.

It was a very pleasant seat that Martha found at the foot of a big maple on the highest bank of the lake. She could see its silvery surface dimpling in the sunshine, dotted with boats, while the steamer plowed its way back and forth with its merry load of pleasure seekers. Across the lake and on every side, the white tents of the campers were gleaming from leafy bowers, and the blue smoke from their camp fires curled lazily upward in the distance. How restful it all was, and how kind of Robert to make her come.
She felt that she could sit there forever and watch the silvery waves and the fleecy clouds scudding across the blue sky. Martha noticed that the little rowboats always found their way to the tangle of water lilies on the opposite side, and she remembered, halfregretfully, a similar scene in which she had participated. How long ago it seemed when she was a young and carefree. She was a bit of a flirt in those days, this said Martha Brown, and quite the belle of the rural neighborhood.
Today she remembered Ross Harding and the little boat—just because she was here amid similar scenes, she told herself. He had rowed her among the lilies and had fastened some of the buds in her hair, and she had pinned one on his coat. Martha was surprised to find how vividly his words came back to her to-day across all the years. "You are like them, Mattie, and I shall soon gather you from the parent stem and wear you always next my heart, my pure, white lily." She had laughed at him for his fanciful conceit, and had thrown the lilies into the lake.
A white lily, indeed! Martha looked down on her skinny brown hands, calloused and hard with drudgery, and gave a pitiful little smile at the thought that twelve years ago she had been called a white lily. Robert had never called her anything but Marthy.
Even as a lover he had always been matter-of-fact and sensible, so much so that she never had professed her love to him. Instead of the "vittified" Ross Harding, she hardly knew how it had come about. She did not have time to think about this very often—how the grief had widened between her and Ross. Of course it was better as it was. Robert had always been kind, though perhaps he had not understood her just as Ross—

A shrill scream started her from her dangerous meditation, and Sadie came rushing up the bank. "They are in the water, both of them, and Emily can't get them out!"

Martha arose weak and trembling, for a moment, and then, without down the path, then through a wet, marshy bog she sped after Sadie in a short cut to the boat landing. On one side the water was shallow, and a dozen children of all ages were paddling in the water. The twins had slipped off their shoes while the girls were watching the long string of passengers coming up from the steamer, and the children of all ages were splashing their chubby legs about in great glee, utterly regardless of Emily's commands to come to shore. Much relieved to find them in no particular danger, Martha soon got them to the bank, dried their legs, put on their shoes and stockings, then all started to find father, Martha thinking that if they all got together again she would lose sight of them and time to return home. After a long search, she found Mr. Brown with a solitary companion, standing upon a log, utterly oblivious to their sorrowful, healthlessly watching a fat man's race. Baby was nowhere in sight. Martha dropped down on the log in her midst.

"For goodness sake, Robert, where is baby?"

"The baby? Why bless me! I don't know! He was with me awhile."

"Where is baby?"

Have you seen him? Well! Well!
Don't fret. I dare say he is all right.
He's with him. I don't know.

But Martha had regained her strength for the moment and was rushing frantically about from group to group, and from one point of interest to another. At last, after weary searching they found him curled close to the monkey cages, fast asleep.
Martha drew a great sigh of relief that ended in a sob, as she pressed him to her breast and looked around to see if any of the rest were missing. No, they were all in sight, and she hurried them to the wagon and stowed them away where they would be comfortable and safe. Her feet were soaking wet, where she had gone over shoes in the bog in her search about Robbie

"WHERE IS BABY?"

and Joe, and she was shivering and aching in every fiber of her body.

"We are going to be late home," said Mr. Brown as he hitched up his big horse to the wagon. "But I guess we can stand it for once; we don't go anywhere very often."

Later that night Farmer Brown knocked at the door of Rev. Jones.
"If you will, you to come over and see to Marthy while I burn up the doctor," he said. "She is burnin' with fever, and talkin' like mad.
Thinks the twins are drownin'.
Amongst the water lilies. It bein' all how little that woman can stand. It don't appear to hurt her a peg around all day at work, but that little jant to the picnic to-day just used her up.
Maybe recreation's a good thing, but it don't agree with Marthy."

The doctor came, inquired into the circumstances and details, examined the delicious patient carefully prescribed for her and then sought her husband.

"Mr. Brown," said he, "you will be likely to lose your wife."

"My dear friend, isn't it so bad as that, is it? I thought she was just done out goin' to the picnic."

"The picnic would have done her good had she not been 'done out' before hand. She is too hard, too constantly, too many hours. She has too much care upon her mind. She is one of the women who cannot shirk responsibility as long as it rests upon her. My man alive! She has taken two steps to your one during the last ten or fifteen years. She has worked an hour and a half to your hour, and has had double the care and responsibility. This must all stop, if she recovers from the attack. She must have rest, and in order to have it, she must be placed in a condition to receive it. In other words, she must be rested, and it will do no good for her to stop work, and about affairs generally, unless she knows that the work is going on all right, that the children are promptly cared for, and that affairs all around are prospering. Your wife is one of the 'salt of the earth' Mr. Brown.
Keep her with you as long as you can.
You will never be able to replace her.
She is all loyal to your interests. When she is gone, life will lose most of its attraction for you. You love her loyalty, but you have been blind. Open your eyes, and see that the children are well, that she has helped you to accomplish, in prolonging her life and making her and yourself happy."

It was a plain lecture, and Farmer Brown understood it. He was a good man, a level-headed, practical man, and had been blind, but now he could see.
The doctor had opened his eyes. His wife lived. It was a long, hard struggle, but good care and a good constitution won out. The doctor's words were that Mrs. Brown never had occasion to complain of being tired. She could go to picnics, farmers' institutes, to social gatherings, or take a pleasure trip, without any "done out" feeling. She ready, and under such restful conditions and assurance she regained her health completely, and lived long to help her children and to do good and useful and honorable deeds, until she

SCHOOL AND CHURCH

—Students in the university of Berlin may have their choice of 716 lectures.

—Of the 2,747 Congregational ministers in England and Wales 3,063 do not drink alcoholic liquors as a beverage.

—In Hunan, China, a woman over fifty years of age sent a missionary two beautifully gilded images, with a message that she had no more use for them.

—There are in the United States, Canada, England, and Scotland thirty-two thousand missionary societies. They collect annually over a million dollars and support 1,377 missionaries.

—Bishop Brennan of Texas, now archbishop of the Catholic province of Dallas, is the youngest man of his rank in the world, and his promotion is said to be Pope Leo's own personal act.

—The Mpravian church in point of numbers is one of the least important of churches, but judged by its missionary work it is one of the foremost. During the past year it expended in its foreign mission work $354,490.

—The clergyman who has continuously occupied one pulpit longer than any other divine in the country is Rev.
Dr. Farnes of Philadelphia. His age is ninety, and for sixty-eight years he has been pastor of one church.

—During the first year of Gen. Booth's scheme of relief for the poor in England, 2,851,411 cheap meals were supplied, of which 1,097,966 were half-penny dinners. Two hundred ex-criminals said to have been reformed during that time.

—Fr. Martin, who has been elected general of the Society of Jesus, was at the convention at Azepezin, Spain, the youngest member ever chosen to the office, with the exception of one of the earlier generals, who succeeded to the office when, only thirty-five years old.
Fr. Martin is forty-four years of age.

—Senator Stanford has announced that his life interest is settled in the university at Palo Alto, which he founded in memory of his son. He means, he says, to give away most of his fortune during his lifetime and see if he can not spend the money as well as anyone else. The bulk of the great fortune will probably go to the university.

The recent statistical quarterly statement of the German empire reports the latest religious data of the country. According to these Germany has 31,626,816 Protestant subjects; 17, 474,921 Roman Catholics; 145,840 other Christians; 267,841 Jews; 570 adherents of other religions, and 12,738 without any religious profession. The total population is 49,425,470.

UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

The French Sending Messengers Through the

The methods employed by the Parisian authorities for communicating with the provinces during the siege of Paris were persevering and ingenious. The principal means of sending letters was by balloons and carrier pigeons, but other plans were tried. It was almost impossible for a messenger to get through the German lines. Even when this difficulty could be overcome, the danger of a search and a discovery of a dispatch was great.

Many of the messengers made in-cisions in the skin, and hid a dispatch under the epidermis. The epidermis themselves with hollow tin confide pieces, or hollow keys, which could be opened like a box, and in which dispatches could be hidden. One was a cylindrical tin, butting and gently artificial hollow. The dispatches, of course, were written in cipher, and covered only a fragment of paper.

Attempts were made to cross the enemy's lines, by following the caves and natural tunnels under the left branch of the Seine, and by diving and crossing the bed of the river in diving suits, but these plans failed.

A curious method was the putting of letters into little hollow squares of zinc, and throwing these spheres into the Seine or its tributaries, hoping that they would float to Paris. They did float to Paris, but not until after the armistice. It is supposed that they were stopped by dams, or that they were discovered and held back by the Germans until the siege was at an end.

Another clever and economical device was the use of hollow glass spheres with an orifice to admit the dispatch.
These were small and light; they looked like bubbles on the water, but were impossible to blow. They floated easily over the dams and through the nets set by the Germans. They would probably have proved very useful had not the river frozen soon after they were invented.—Youth's Companion.

A Deserved Compliment.

Irvine is blessed with one citizen who attends strictly and promptly to his own business, and does not pry into or meddle with other people's business. He is a thorough scholar, a linguist, concise and logical reasoner, and strong in debate. He never loses his temper. No matter what you hurl at him he will meet it face to face with cool judgment and logical reasoning. He never backbites a friend. He never slanders a neighbor, nor gives countenance to any report that is calculated to injure the character or reputation of any one. He is generous, kind and liberal, and always contributes to those who are more unfortunate than himself. He never swears, nor uses tobacco in any form. He seldom attends church, though he is a strong believer in protestant religion. He is a fine violinist, and can stir your soul to the very bottom with the sweet strains from his violin. All in all, he is a splendid example for the youth of the land to study and follow after. He spells his name this way: James Bamford White.—Estill Engle.

Mr. J. P. Blaize, an extensive real estate dealer in Des Moines, Iowa, narrowly escaped one of the severest attacks of pneumonia while in the northern part of that state during a recent blizzard, says the Saturday Review. Mr. Blaize had occasion to drive several miles during the storm and was so thoroughly chilled that he was unable to get warm, and inside of an hour after his return he was threatened with a severe case of pneumonia or lung fever. Mr. Blaize sent to the nearest drug store and got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, of which he had often heard, and took a number of large doses. He says the effect was wonderful and in a short time he was breathing quite easily. He kept on taking the medicine and next day was able to come to Des Moines. Mr. Blaize regards his cure so simply wonderful. For sale by Rose & Jones.

Mr. Sayre's Class of 1849.

"B. B. Sayre, a pedagogue, teaching a small school at Frankfort, Ky., turned out the most remarkable class in 1849 that ever graduated from a schoolroom," said John J. Dixon, of San Antonio. "Mr. Justice Harlan, of the United States supreme court; Senator George G. Vest, Gratz Brown, ex-governor of Missouri, who was nominated for vice-president on the Greeley ticket in 1872; ex-governor Thos. T. Crittenden, of Missouri; Vice-president Adlai E. Stevenson, Senator Joe Blackburn, of Kentucky; and John Mason Brown, one of the most prominent lawyers of Louisville, all walked out of the little school room as graduates. From there they went to Centro College, at Danville, Ky., where they graduated in law and they started out in the world to make their names."—St. Louis Republic.

When on a visit to Iowa, Mr. K. Dalton, of Luray, Russell county, Kansas, called at the laboratory of Chamberlain & Co., Des Moines, to show them his six-year old boy, whose life had been saved by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, it having cured him of a very severe attack of croup. Mr. Dalton is certain that it saved his boy's life and is enthusiastic in his praise of the remedy. For sale by Rose & Jones.

Consins to Hazel Green Ladies.

Not since the days of the Washburns have there been brothers in the same congress. History in this respect will repeat itself next year. Senator Cockrell, of Missouri, will enter upon his fourth term, and at the same time his brother, Representative Cockrell, of Texas, will begin his first term. The Senator is the younger of the brothers by two and a half years.

But he has eighteen years the start of the Texan in Washington life. Both of the Cockrells are lawyers. Both were confederates from the beginning to the end of the war. Both attained the responsibility of the command of brigades. The elder Cockrell directed the famous battle of Lone Jack.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A country woman stood half an hour in front of the postoffice, gazing all the while at the letter box. "What are you doing here all this time?" inquired one of the clerks. "Why, I dropped a letter in there and am waiting for a reply."—Ex.

A Massachusetts True Story.

Williamstown, Mass., boasts of a centurion who is still as lively and chipper as many men of half his age. He is Abraham Parsons, the "butler," a colored man who claims to be 105 years old, and who was a man grown when the rest of the town was in knee breeches. He has a record of killing twenty-six horses with his fist, and killed a cow once by butting her in the head. On another occasion he broke a grindstone with his head. The stone was put in a cheese box and he was told he could have the cheese if he could break it. He is married to a white woman and has five grown sons.

CINCINNATI'S

New Two Cent Morning Paper.

The Tribune, Cincinnati's new two cent morning paper, the announcement of the early appearance of which we noted recently, will appear about January 24. Its publishers say they will make it not the largest, but the best daily paper published in Cincinnati; that it will compare favorably with the great two cent papers of Chicago and other leading cities. It will not be issued on Sunday. The price by mail will be fifty cents per month, or six dollars a year in advance. Do not pay for a copy of the paper for the coming year until you have seen the Tribune.

Resolutions of the Irvine Bar.

The Irvine bar passed the following resolutions concerning Judge Patrick's and Judge Lilly's retirement from the respective positions they have filled.

Resolved, First—That we desire to express our feelings of regret at the retirement of Judge Samuel H. Patrick of the common pleas court, and to express our feelings of attachment to him for his position, fairness and gentlemanly conduct to the members of the bar and officers of the court.

Second—We desire to express to Judge H. C. Lilly, our belief in his integrity and devotion to his duty, and commend him to those among whom he lives.
